Antibiotics – When Do We Really Need Them?

Each year, World Antimicrobial Resistance Awareness Week (18–24 November) highlights one of the growing challenges facing healthcare worldwide: antimicrobial resistance. It is a timely reminder that while antibiotics can be lifesaving, they need to be used carefully and only when necessary.

Antibiotics are medicines used to treat certain bacterial infections. They work by killing bacteria or stopping them from multiplying. Importantly, antibiotics do not work against viruses, including those responsible for most colds, influenza and COVID-19.

Antibiotic resistance occurs when bacteria change over time and become resistant to medicines that previously killed them. This can make common infections more difficult to treat and may result in longer illnesses, more complicated medical care and fewer effective treatment options.

Everyone can help protect these important medicines. Don't pressure your doctor for antibiotics when they aren't recommended. If antibiotics are prescribed, take them exactly as directed by your doctor or pharmacist. Never take antibiotics prescribed for another person or save leftover antibiotics for another illness.

Preventing infections can also reduce our reliance on antibiotics. Regular handwashing, good hygiene, staying up to date with recommended vaccinations and avoiding the spread of illness all play a role.

This World Antimicrobial Resistance Awareness Week, consider how you use antibiotics. These medicines are a valuable healthcare resource, and using them responsibly today can help ensure they continue to work when we genuinely need them in the future.

National Carers Week – Caring for Those Who Care

National Carers Week, held from 11–17 October 2026, is an opportunity to recognise and celebrate the more than 3 million Australians who provide unpaid care and support to a family member or friend.

Carers come from all walks of life and may support someone living with a disability, chronic or mental health condition, terminal illness, alcohol or other drug issue, or an older person who needs assistance. Many carers balance these responsibilities with work, study, family commitments and their own health.

The 2026 theme, "Care for a carer: Making carers visible," encourages Australians to recognise the important contribution carers make and to consider how we can better support them.

Caring for another person can be incredibly rewarding, but it can also be physically and emotionally demanding. Carers may experience stress, fatigue, social isolation and difficulty finding time to look after their own wellbeing.

National Carers Week is a reminder that carers need care too. Something as simple as checking in, offering practical help, providing a listening ear or giving a carer time for themselves can make a meaningful difference.

Carers needing additional assistance can access free information, counselling, peer support and other services through the Australian Government's Carer Gateway.

This October, take a moment to recognise the carers in your family, workplace and community—and ask: who cares for the carer?

Movember

Every November, moustaches appear on faces across Australia as part of Movember, a global movement dedicated to improving the health and wellbeing of men.

Movember began in Melbourne in 2003 with a simple idea: grow a moustache and use it to start conversations about men's health. Since then, it has developed into a worldwide movement supporting more than 1,300 men's health projects.

The campaign focuses on three major areas: mental health and suicide prevention, prostate cancer and testicular cancer. These are important issues because many men are reluctant to discuss health concerns or seek help when something doesn't feel right.

Movember encourages men to take a more proactive approach to their health. This can include having regular health checks, knowing their family medical history, staying physically active and speaking to a doctor about unusual symptoms or concerns.

Mental health is equally important. Checking in with a mate, asking how someone is really going and being prepared to listen can make a meaningful difference. Movember encourages stronger social connections and conversations that go beyond everyday banter.

You don't need to grow a moustache to participate. You can raise funds, get active, organise an event or simply start a conversation.

This November, use Movember as a reminder: looking after your health isn't a weakness—it's one of the strongest things you can do.

The Social Media Trend Affecting Teens

A growing social media trend known as "looksmaxxing" is raising concerns about body image and self-esteem among teenagers, particularly boys and young men. The term refers to trying to "maximise" physical attractiveness through changes to appearance, fitness and lifestyle.

At its mildest, looksmaxxing can involve positive habits such as improving personal hygiene, skincare, hairstyles, clothing, posture and physical fitness. However, the trend can become problematic when teenagers begin obsessively comparing themselves with unrealistic beauty standards promoted online.

Some looksmaxxing content focuses heavily on facial symmetry, jawlines, body fat and muscularity. Teens may also encounter AI-powered tools that rate their faces and suggest perceived "flaws". More extreme forms have promoted restrictive dieting, excessive exercise, unregulated supplements, steroids and potentially dangerous practices intended to alter facial structure.

Australian teenagers are also encountering this content. The eSafety Commissioner warns that appearance-focused social media can create pressure to believe that personal value depends on how someone looks.

Parents should be alert to sudden changes in eating or exercise habits, excessive mirror checking, constant comparison with others, withdrawal from social activities or increasing distress about appearance.

Rather than dismissing looksmaxxing as simply another internet fad, parents can encourage open conversations about what teenagers are seeing online. Healthy grooming and exercise can build confidence, but appearance should never determine a young person's self-worth.

Helping teenagers value their personality, abilities, friendships and achievements can provide an important counterbalance to the pressure to look "perfect".

Get Your Skin Checked Before Summer

As summer approaches, Australians naturally start thinking about beaches, holidays and spending more time outdoors. It is also an ideal time to take a closer look at your skin.

Australia has one of the highest rates of skin cancer in the world, with ultraviolet (UV) radiation from the sun being the major cause. Most skin cancers can be successfully treated when detected early, making awareness of changes to your skin particularly important.

Before summer, get to know what is normal for your skin. Check your entire body, including areas that are easy to overlook such as your scalp, back, soles of the feet, between your toes and under your nails.

Look for new spots or changes to existing moles or freckles, particularly changes in size, shape or colour. Spots that become raised, bleed, itch, crust or simply look different from your other spots should also be investigated. If you notice anything unusual, make an appointment with your GP rather than waiting to see if it disappears.

People at higher risk of skin cancer should discuss with their doctor how frequently they need professional skin examinations.

With National Skin Cancer Action Week held in November, it's the perfect time to make skin health a priority before summer arrives so ask your GP about a skin check now!

- Freshly ground black pepper
- 8 small soft tortillas
